Not illustrated. 1918 Excerpt: . . . on the out-voyage and homeward bound, and the very basis of business for our merchant marine is to build new trade for ourselves by helping other nations increase their production and finding them new markets. Before the war Great Britain and America were commercially asleep. The United States had no merchant marine on the ocean and could neither develop her own trade in manufactured goods nor serve other nations by improving their markets for raw materials. Great Britain had her wonderful empire, but permitted Germany to develop many of its resources through German ships and German scientific production. Germany overreached herself because her philosophy of trade and shipping was wrong--based upon selfish exploitation and one-sided dealing. England and America have both learned their lessons. They are now waking to the possibilities in a new world of international service. He profits most who serves most. One nation can not prosper at the expense of another. World trade is not one-sided--both parties to a bargain must be better off after the exchange is made. Trade in both raw materials and manufactured goods is unsound and transitory unless behind it the nations making the exchange are developing their agriculture, their mines, their factories, transportation, wealth, and living standards. Our new merchant ships will take us into this great field of international service and international opportunity. It is time for Americans everywhere to be thinking of world trade from this angle of raw materials. Buyers Register (S. E. Hendricks Co....
